

Dr. Saturnino Luján graduated from University of Valencia (Spain) of Bachelors Science degree in Nursing and Degree in Medicine and Surgery. He received his urology certification from University Hospital La Fe (Valencia, Spain). He completed his PhD with magna cum laude qualification in the field of mathematical model for bladder cancer. In 2012, he specialized in andrology surgery at University College of London directed by Mr. David Ralph. From 2013 to 2014 he performed a fellowship program of male infertility at University of Illinois, Chicago, directed by Dr. Craig Niederberger. He is currently a urology consultant at Urology department of University Hospital La Fe (Valencia, Spain) and urology collaborator at IVI Valencia.

Dr. Luján has more than 30 papers published in peer reviewed journals, five chapters in urology books and he is author of two books published. He is principal investigator of projects in male infertility at Health Research Institute in the University Hospital La Fe (Valencia, Spain) and he is thesis supervisor from two project in the field of male infertility. He is associate editor from the Revista Internacional de Andrología, official journal of the Spanish Andrology Association and reviewer from Actas Españolas de Urología, official journal from the Spanish Association of Urology.